

From Principal's Desk

When one believes the phrase "you are what you think", life truly reflects from one's thoughts. As we cannot rely purely on thoughts; we must translate thoughts into words and eventually into actions in order to manifest our intentions.

Most people repeat in their minds negative words and statements concerning the situations and events in their lives, and consequently, create undesirable situations.

Words can both build or destroy. It is the way we use them that determines whether they are going to bring good or harmful results.

Imagine that you are swimming with your friends in a swimming pool. They swim fifteen rounds, something you have never done before, and since you want to win their respect, you want to show them that you can make it too.

You start swimming, and at the same time keep repeating in your mind, "I can do it, I can do it...". You keep thinking and believing that you are going to complete the fifteen rounds.

In a different situation, you might find yourself repeating, "I cannot do this", "It's too big for me", "It is not going to work out", and consequently, lose ambition, motivation and faith, and actually bring about what you said to yourself.

Repeating positive statements help you focus your mind on your aim. By using this process consciously and intently, you influence your mind, and in turn, it transforms your habits, behaviour, attitude, and reactions, and even reshape your life.

Dr. Nicholas Correa

Editorial

Everyone has a will to win but very few have the will to prepare and win. Most people spend more time planning a party or vacation than planning for their future. Preparation is the necessary edge to succeed in any field.

"You sow a thought you reap an action
You sow an action, you reap a habit
You sow a habit you reap a character."

It all starts with a thought This very inspirational thought helps us to be motivated in our life. As a teacher it is inevitable to sow these seeds. We are proud that we sow these seeds in students at a tender age. This second issue highlights our success in academics and sports. It has been more than a decade since our school is fulfilling its aim.

It is a matter of pride that we are outstanding in all these fields and motivating our students to build a society filled with optimism and love. As a teacher we have to mould young minds and sow seeds of a better life. We need to take these steps at the correct time, preferably at a tender age, rather than promote the idea of success as a measure of one's monetary value.

We as educators need to take a more pragmatic approach that is to inculcate in the younger generation, a sense of self belief and empathy towards everyone in the society.
